

SLTED2022

Second Language Teacher Education: Challenges and New Horizons

Conference 15-17 September 2022

Across the world, children, teenagers and adults learn foreign languages as part of their school curriculum, work commitments or leisure activities with the expectation that this experience will help them grow as global citizens. Their success at language learning hinges on the competences of professional teachers. It is therefore crucial to achieve a research-based understanding of the knowledge base(s) needed by language teachers as well as their processes of becoming and continuously developing as teachers.

Who?

This conference aims to bring together researchers into language teacher education from all over the world to share their research and engage in lively and fruitful discussions. It combines inspiring keynotes and invited symposia on special issues as well as presentations and posters by teacher educators and researchers.

What?

We welcome contributions from new and experienced language teacher educators and researchers on any aspect of language teacher education. We look forward to hearing about research taking place in diverse types of pre- and in-service language teacher education and focusing on any target language.

The conference language is English.

Stay up to date by joining the SLTED2022 mailing list here.

When and where?

This three-day conference will be held on 15-17 September 2022. The location for the conference will be the University of Vienna, Austria.

What next?

A call for contributions to the programme will be launched in October 2021 and registration will open in March 2022. In the meantime, please sign up to our mailing list by following this link and keep an eye on our website slted2022.univie.ac.at .

Contact: slted2022@univie.ac.at